Classification of Occupations 91

Index of Occupations 119

INTRODUCTION.

In order to obtain accurate statistical analyses of the economic and social structure of the community, the occupied population must be classified in at least two ways, according to two distinct concepts—

(i) The industry, trade or organized service of which each person forms a unit ;

(ii) The individual occupation or function of the person within the industry through which his services are rendered.

The distinction between the terms "industry" and "occupation" is not always sufficiently appreciated, and frequently the terms are used as if they were synonymous. In view of the importance of a clear understanding of these terms in their relation to the classification of the population in its working capacity, it is desirable to define the sense in which they are used for statistical purposes—

Industry is defined as any single branch of productive activity, trade or service. It is concerned with the activities of persons, firms or businesses considered as a group producing the same commodity, performing the same process or providing the same service. All persons engaged in any such sphere of economic activity are classified industrially as belonging to the particular branch in question irrespective of their personal occupation within the industry. Examples : Building, Coke Manufacture, Gold Mining, Poultry-raising, Medicine.

Occupation is defined as the nature of the work which a person performs, and implies personal performance. It may be based on the material treated, the process carried out or the type of service rendered by an individual worker. Examples : Carpenter, Steward, Stoker, Moulder, Surgeon.

The distinction between the two concepts can further be sharpened by keeping in mind certain important objects in classifying the occupied population—

(i) One of the objects of classification by industries is to show the absolute and relative importance of the various branches of industry. For that purpose a person's industrial classification is determined by reference to the business, trade, profession or service in which, or for the purposes of which, his occupation is followed. It is clear that consideration of the individual's personal occupation is not relevant, and therefore does not enter into the classification by industries ;

(ii) The main object of classification by occupation is to secure a clearly defined appreciation of the particular functions which a person performs. For that purpose the occupational classification of the person is determined by reference either to the materials treated, the processes carried out, the nature of the personal qualifications or skill required, or, in the case of occupations not concerned with the making of material products, the type of service rendered. It is clear that the nature of the branch of productive activity in which he is engaged, and its organization into groups of firms and businesses, has no direct bearing on the occupational classification. In certain circumstances, nevertheless, a knowledge of the industry in which a person is engaged helps more clearly to define his personal occupation.

CLASS OF OCCUPATION.

For a number of purposes it has been found necessary to group occupations into eleven principal types as follows:-

1. Employers, managers, proprietors, and workers on own account engaged in non-rural industries.
2. Not used (originally intended for workers on own account).
3. Professions.
4. Clerical and kindred workers.
5. Defence.
6. Salesmen and shop assistants.
7. Skilled manual workers.
8. Semi-skilled manual workers.
9. Unskilled manual workers.
10. Employers, managers, proprietors, farmers, pastoralists, and other workers on own account engaged in rural industries, including forestry, fishing, and trapping.
11. Farm labourers, station hands, forest and fishery employees, and other rural workers.
12. Personal and domestic service.

This classification is used in vital statistics, statistics of occupation in relation to education, and for other purposes..

In the pages which follow, the figures which precede the four-figure occupation code numbers indicate "class of occupation" in accordance with the above code.

For practical reasons, these classes had to be fitted to the Classification of Occupations shown on pages 91 to 118, wherein certain entries include a range of occupations covering varying degrees of skill.
